

My choice of insurance would probably Progressive as opposed to Geico or USAA because it has the best overall ratings at about 7.67 on average. It also has the highest minimum rating as its minimum rating is at a 6.7, which means that there's almost no way it could go wrong. Also, despite the fact that GEICO has the highest peaks of rating at a 9.2, it's still not a good candidate as its minimum rating is a 4.7, which is a serious consistency issue and for your insurance, consistency is so important as your financial well-being could be on the line. The weakest candidate out of all the options though is USAA as it has the lowest minimum rating of 3.8 and a maximum rating of 8.1, being an overall dud. All in all, Progressive is the best insurance plan as it has reasonable highs and a great average, without having horrific lows like that of GEICO, and especially for something as important as insurance, consistency is king, hence why Progressive is the best option.
